Answer Key

1. Hyperbole (Exaggerating the emotional pain of saying goodbye as if it were a series of physical cuts)
2. Metaphor (Comparing the act of looking into a past relationship to looking through windows that have been closed off)
3. Personification (Giving the bridges human qualities, as if they can burn and have the capacity to learn)
4. Simile (Comparing the falling of autumn leaves to how pieces fall into place, implying a natural order or design)
5. Metaphor (Equating a person with a broken promise, suggesting a betrayal or disappointment)
6. Allusion (Referring to the characters Peter Pan and Wendy, drawing a parallel to a story or experience ending)
7. Simile and Metaphor (Using "like" to compare words to knives and swords is a simile, but it also metaphorically attributes the qualities of weapons to words)
8. Personification (Attributing the human action of whispering to eyes, which cannot literally whisper)
9. Hyperbole (An exaggerated statement that someone is gone or absent even though they are physically present)
10. Simile and Hyperbole (Comparing loving someone to a futile and dangerous act is a simile; exaggerating the speed to be "faster than the wind" is hyperbole)

12. Allusion (Referring to the characters Romeo and Juliet to evoke the feeling of being alone and wanting a romantic resolution)

14. Metaphor (Using memories as something that can be held, suggesting that they have a tangible, supportive quality)
15. Simile, Oxymoron, Pun (Describing a complex personality with contrasting images "nightmare" and "daydream" is a simile; combining opposing terms "nightmare" and "daydream" is an oxymoron; "dressed like a daydream" suggests a play on words with "dressed" as it is not literal, which can be seen as a pun)
16. Metaphor (The monsters are not literal but represent fears or obstacles)
17. Metaphor (Comparing oneself to a crumpled piece of paper to suggest being discarded or feeling worthless)
18. Metaphor (Describing the vividness of an experience by contrasting colors)
19. Verbal Irony (The phrase implies the speaker did not literally enjoy the act of ruining things, which is usually negative)
20. Hyperbole (Exaggerating for effect; not literally burning witches)
21. Simile (Comparing a phone call to a love song)
22. Simile (Describing lips and skies using "like" to compare them to cherries and crystal)
23. Allusion (Referring to a shared knowledge of being young or a common phrase/story)

24. Personification (Attributing human qualities to the air being cold as if the air acts with intent)
25. Oxymoron (Juxtaposing the concepts of high pleasure with pain)
26. Hyperbole (Exaggeration for effect; the lights are very bright but don't literally blind)
27. Metaphor (James Dean is associated with a specific image or persona)
